Making all homes more accessible and safer than current industry practices

Woodstock, CT (July 9, 2017) – The Living In Place Institute™ is pleased to announce the successful completion of another Certified Living In Place Professional™ (CLIPP™) class. This class, approved for continuing education by National Kitchen & Bath Association, International Interior Design Association, American Occupational Therapy Association, American Society of Home Inspectors, and others, creates interprofessional networks of experts working to make all homes safer.

Kellie Suplicki is one of the recent graduates, Kellie is honored to now be a part of the solution to improving independence and dignity for all homeowners through sharing their skills to identify safety concerns and recommend solutions in any home, regardless of the homeowner's age or needs. "I am looking forward to helping my community become a safer place to live, one home at a time. My clients will benefit from my new Certified Living In Place Professional™ designation and my passion for helping each client."

"It was an honor and pleasure to welcome Kellie Suplicki as one of the nationally respected professionals who participated in the recent CLIPP™ class," says Erik Listou and Louie Delaware, Co-Founders of the Living In Place Institute. "Like many other housing professionals across the nation, Kellie shares a concern for home accessibility and safety. Most homes were built with no attention to accessibility and safety risks that increase home accidents. Kellie is now one of the experts leading our communities, and the nation, taking responsibility to guide all homeowners to ensure the safest and most accessible homes. Only CLIPP trained professionals have access to an electronic checklist (Home Accessibility and Safety Assessment Checklist™) designed to thoroughly and quickly identify and make recommendations for home modifications and products that help everyone, regardless of their age or needs."

Kellie Suplicki is the Kitchen and Bath Designer at Chace Building Supply of CT. Kellie has been serving the Northeast Corner of Connecticut and neighboring Massachusetts and Rhode Island counties for 10 years. Chace Building Supply is a local, family-owned business that has been serving our community since 1992!
